

Colin Perry | Biography

Writer-Director

An award-winning screenwriter, Colin established Analysis Lost to augment his progression as a director, with the specific intention of turning his scripts into films. He has experienced every level of film production, starting out with an apprenticeship under Richard Attenborough on the feature film Grey Owl (1999) and moving on to producing and directing his own short film, Ball Rolling (2001). He has written a number of other shorts and a feature screenplay for Panic Attack, a project currently in development.

Colin has worked on a number of low budget films and more expansive corporate initiatives with sister company Those Media Guys Ltd., gaining valuable experience and considerable expertise in cinematography, acting, production management and digital editing. All this because the deficit of an inch and a half in height cut short a promising career in modelling.

As well as the continued advancement of Panic Attack after its success in the Scriptapalooza competition, Colin is developing a number of shorts and a sitcom, and is currently underway on a commission for a computer game script.